

JODI INTERNSHIPS

for officials from Developing Countries

The Joint Oil Data Initiative (JODI) is an outcome of the producer-consumer dialogue in the International Energy Forum and a flagship activity for the IEF Secretariat. Nearly 100 countries are submitting oil data covering products and flows on a monthly basis to JODI with the aim of contributing to the oil market transparency that again will reduce market volatility and enhance global energy security.

The Government of Norway has generously provided to the Secretariat additional funding to promote JODI among developing countries. This enables the Secretariat to offer short-term internships at Secretariat Headquarters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia for officials in developing countries dealing directly with oil market statistics.

The Secretariat invites IEF and JODI participating countries to forward applications from interested candidates in their relevant energy agencies. A primary objective of the internships would be to strengthen working level contacts between the country in question and the Secretariat as well as to improve and maintain the quality of national data submissions to JODI. The envisaged duration of the short-term JODI internships will be one – two weeks.

The IEF Secretariat is co-ordinating JODI with the active support of partner organizations: the Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation (APEC), the European Union through Eurostat, the International Energy Agency (IEA), the Latin-American Energy Organization (OLADE), the organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC and the United Nations through the UN Statistics Division.
